

One of a kind care comes from one of a kind people

Academic Affairs Resident Spotlight

Garrett “Hunter” Williams, MD

Specialty

Orthopedic Surgery

School affiliation

Tulane University School of Medicine

Why did you become a healthcare provider?

Being a type 1 diabetic, I was able to see firsthand from a very young age the profound impact a physician can have on his or her patients. If it wasn't for the care that I received from many physicians that cared for me as a young patient, I would not be in the position that I am today.

Why can patients count on you to provide extraordinary care?

I believe that I can provide extraordinary care to all patients because I truly know what it's like to deal with a chronic illness on a daily basis. I understand the frustrations when things are not going well, and I hope that my ability to relate to them on a personal level fosters a relationship that leads to the best quality care.

What's your little something extra?

Patients might be surprised to learn that I turned down the opportunity to play professional baseball to begin my career in medicine.

